

Law firm Knights set for further expansion in South West

Listed law firm Knights has announced its move into a new Devon office.

The professional services business will move into a modern office in Exeter and has revealed plans to do the same in Bristol early next year. The firm has grown across the South West, with colleagues in Cheltenham, Bristol and Exeter working as part of a team of more than 1,200 professionals across 23 locations nationwide.

The business is now investing in premium, grade A offices to provide clients with even better access to the comprehensive range of expertise Knights has to offer as the fastest-growing, and largest, regional professional services business in the UK.

Knights' team in Exeter have moved into Broadwalk House and has set out plans to move to a flagship office at 100 Victoria in Bristol city centre in 2024.

James Christacos, client services director at Knights, said: "This is great news for our team right across the South West. We are investing in our people as we grow across the region.

"We have added some top talent to our teams this year, and these fantastic new offices will help us to deliver our wide range of services across both our business and private wealth offerings as we recruit more talented professionals to join us."

The office moves are a continuation of Knights' programme of investment in Grade A, energy efficient offices across the UK: creating optimal working spaces, supporting collaboration among colleagues, and providing a first class venue for clients.
