

New Black Country HQ for Volumech

A concrete mixer specialist has opened a new HQ in the Black Country.

Volumech was founded in 2005 and provides replacement parts, refurbishments and servicing for all brands of volumetric mixers.

Its new facility in Atlantic Way, Wednesbury, will act as the European headquarters for its parent company Cemen Tech and offer factory-level support to its expanding clientele.

Cemen Tech is a manufacturer of volumetric concrete mixers and the new base will also be a dealership for its products.

Volumech's country manager Brandon Hess said: "Our decision to consolidate is a direct response to the evolving needs of our market and the dynamic landscape of our industry."

“By streamlining our operations, we are better positioned to serve our customers across the UK and beyond.”

Chief executive of Cemen Tech Connor Deering added: “This pivotal expansion mirrors the escalating growth of volumetric mixers in the UK and across Europe and highlights Cemen Tech’s dedication to our valued customers in this continually growing market.

“We see significant potential for volumetric mixer technology throughout Europe.

“The Wednesbury facility will allow us to expand our presence and focus on key markets looking to utilise this technology to increase their efficiency and reduce their material costs.”
