

Calum Melville and The Edison Group purchase new Head Office building in Irvine, Scotland.

The Edison Group has recently moved to secure its future by investing in the acquisition of a building that will, in the near future, become the Head Offices for the Edison Group of Companies.

Last month, the Group announced the exciting acquisition of a 50% share in The Property Solutions Company and so this announcement gives a clear indication of the strength of the Scotland-based International company, as well as its intent.

Owner and CEO Calum Melville says: 'We're excited and delighted with this acquisition, as we've been looking for new and bigger premises to be our permanent home for a while. This gives us the opportunity to expand now, and it will let us create approximately 75 new jobs in total during 2023 – 12 here at the Head Office, with around an additional 63 new jobs for trades and crafts people within the company.'

The Edison Group works in a multitude of property sectors across the UK delivering operational change and excellence for investors and end users of their properties, and their continued growth is perhaps an early indicator that the UK's property market crash may not be as terminal as some have prophesied.
