

Britishvolt secures funding, eyes turn to US Federal Reserve, and the rise of sustainable aviation fuel

The electric vehicle battery start-up Britishvolt secures extra funding to help avoid the immediate threat of administration – Ian King speaks to the firm's chief executive Graham Hoare.

All eyes are on the US Federal Reserve as the world's biggest central bank prepares to raise interest rates again.

Plus, the owner of British Airways is looking to agricultural and food waste to make new jet fuel. Ian speaks to Sarah Ellerby, the chief executive of Nova Pangaea Technologies, which is powering the move.

:: Listen and subscribe to The Ian King Business Podcast here.

Advertisement