

Oil prices, Inchcape and Hometree

Global oil prices dipped slightly this morning despite rising tensions in the Middle East.

Ian King is joined by Henry Allen, macro strategist at Deutsche Bank to discuss what it means and the likely impact.

International motor dealer Inchcape has sold its UK retail operations for £346m to the US motor dealer Group 1 Automotive.

Plus, as more of us look to decarbonise our homes, Ian speaks to residential energy services company Hometree Group as it takes on market leaders Homeserve and British Gas. The company's chief executive Simon Phelan explains their ambitions.
